Tribune Model House Attracts Many Visitors

Little Building Is Explored by Family Groups of All Sizes, Enthusiastic for Its Comfort and Design

Wives See Saved Steps Exhibit at Larchmont Gardens One of Series To Be Erected in or Near City

The door to Tribune Model House No. 6, in Larchmont Gardens, was not shut for more than half a minute at a time yesterday and when it opened it admitted groups of two, three and more, intent on exploring the little building from the cellar up. Several hundred persons have called since Sunday and the streets surrounding it are continually lined with automobiles.

Visitors were varied, from three-year-olds who had to be torn from the green pottery duck over the fireplace in the living room, to grandfathers who tapped walking sticks on water pipes with a knowing air. Ninety-nine per cent of the men said "Very neat," after their tour of inspection women, nearly without exception, cried "Isn't that sweet," as soon as they entered the door, and "How perfectly adorable," when they reached the top of the staircase.

From the layout of the rooms and the simplicity of design, the model house seems the place for brides, yet more than one elderly daughter was interested to the extent of ordering one just like it. One pair, who had seen at their children married, declared that the house was ideal for themselves, for it contained a maximum of domestic comfort and efficiency with a minimum of work.

Family Groups

Small families, with only one child, were through No. 6 slowly and carefully. One group, a rosy-cheeked young mother, a little daughter and father in a Norfolk jacket, paused in the living room. There were whispered words about the spindle-back chair in the living room, and how having it in smaller bedroom would be for baby or maid.

More experienced married couples examined closets with delight, and examined the in-door bed, a guest room front entrance. Opposite the brushes, brooms and mops, and the addition of a few hooks, it would do as a place to hang coats. In the bathroom, on the second floor, is a closet, one of which is fitted with shelves to do service as a linen closet. The large bedroom has much space, containing a sewing machine, a dressing pad and other electrical equipment.

The second bedroom would make a good-sized room, it is so deep. The papered walls offered a retreat from the heat of the day. The plastered walls so much in evidence in other homes. Tan figured paper covers the halls, grass cloth the living room. The dining room is a roomy, well-lit space, with a large window, a brocade yellow paper in the small bedroom and a deep cream in the larger bedroom.

Two Porches at Sides

The porches on either side of the house are becoming words that emphasize the broad front of the lot. Each of the porches is floored with a full red tile—a pleasing touch of warmth to offset the green and white paint on the outside of the house. The wood green shutters with crescent cut out are the exact tone of the shrubs planted in the window boxes outside the dining and living rooms. When the plants are in bloom, the vines will be planted to ramble over the lattice-work. The walks and steps at the front of the house are red brick.

The cellar has not yet been completed, but the men who went through it commented on the excellence of the heating apparatus. When it is finished it will hold not only the central heating plant, but the laundry equipment. The kitchen is of the most modern type. The enameled sink is built high enough to make backache impossible. The cupboard is right next to it, and the gas range, so that food may be taken from the icebox and set to cook without an extra step on the part of the housewife. The cabinet is at the right side of the house.

Tribune House No. 6 is at the corner of Weaver Street and Harmon Drive, Larchmont Gardens. It is the first of a series of model houses which are being built from the plans of the National Home Owners' Service Institute to determine present-day costs and conditions of modern construction in various sections within a twenty-five mile radius of New York City.

The plan of the house, designed by John H. Lowell, New York architect, was first group prize in the recent National Architect "Small House Competition," awarded by the National Manufacturers' Association. Three other model homes are now under construction with the joint co-operation of The Tribune and the Home Owners' Service Institute—No. 12, in The Tribune series, a six room, modern model, and No. 31, an eight room English style house, of hollow tile construction, in Flushing. They will be ready within a few weeks.

Model house No. 6 may be seen in its attractive setting, open to the public this week, which is Better Homes Week for the nation.

Ex-Empress Tsai, Tired of Poverty, Asks to Go Home

BUDAPEST, Oct. 10. (By The Associated Press).—Former Empress Tsai, who recently inspired a popular campaign to bring her back to Hungary, is tired of poverty, according to Count Joseph Karolyi, the royalist leader, whose return from Spain recently inspired the campaign.

The former Empress has sold all her jewels, according to the count. The income from her estates in Hungary is insufficient to meet her expenses because of Hungary's depreciated currency. She is willing to live with her children in the castle of Goedello, near Budapest, and will promise not to interfere in politics, the royalist adds.

Catholic Women to Meet

National Council Scheduled in Washington November 21-25

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Catholic women from all parts of the United States will attend the second annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Women which will be held in Washington, November 21 to 25. Programs for the sessions will include plans for organization in the various dioceses of the country and discussion of phases of social work in which Catholic women are engaged.

Among the subjects are: Girl welfare; housing conditions for girls and women in industrial cities; women in industry; travelers aid; immigration and international relations.

The delegates will visit the National Catholic Service School at 2400 Nineteenth Street, N. W., Washington. The school, which is conducted by the National Council of Catholic Women, offers one and two year courses in social work. Its purpose is to train Catholic women for leadership in their communities and also to prepare trained social workers.

Edward O'Dwyer, Chief Justice of City Court, Dead

Born in New York 62 Years Ago, He Achieved Leading Position at the Bar; Wendel Tenders Tribute

Chief Justice Edward F. O'Dwyer, of the City Court, died yesterday at his home, 87 West Seventy-sixth Street. He recently had suffered attacks of apoplexy and paralysis and these are believed to have led to his death. He is survived by his wife, two sons and a daughter. The funeral services will be conducted privately at the home to-morrow morning.

Justice O'Dwyer was born in New York sixty-two years ago and lived here all of his life. He was graduated from the New York Law School in 1885 and as a young attorney served as member of the Board of Aldermen. He later built up an extensive private practice and became a city justice in 1904.

In 1904 Justice O'Dwyer was elected Chief Justice. For several years he was president of the Young Men's Democratic Club. The following tribute was paid to him yesterday by Justice Louis Wendel when he learned of his death:

"Justice O'Dwyer, as every one in this courtroom knows, was a citizen of unusual capabilities and an exceedingly able jurist. There are members of the bar who can look back to the time when as lawyers they were before him and felt his kindly guidance in matters of law and practice. It is an glad that it was my privilege to practice in Judge O'Dwyer's court, and later to take a seat on the bench while his guidance worked for the interests of the bench and bar alike."

Justice John L. W. Webb, who is secretary of the Board of Judges of the City Court, said it would be difficult to replace so capable a member of the judiciary.

The City Court adjourned at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and it was announced that it would adjourn to-morrow in memory of the late Chief Justice.

Frank S. Washburn Dead
